'I appreciated the focus on techniques through learning recipes. I learned how to think of what I wanted the outcome of a dish to be and what tools I needed to make it happen.'

 Head Chef, Abandoned Brewery

Cookery graduate Zach Meech has recently stepped into the role of Head Chef at Abandoned Brewery's new Petone site. From the get-go, Zach has been hands-on, hiring his own team, and building the kitchen from scratch. Zach's role has him dealing with a little bit of everything—creating the menu, dealing with suppliers, training staff and cleaning fridges. We spoke to Zach about his experience and how he landed at Abandoned Brewery in Petone.

A passion for cookery

From a young age, Zach had always had a love of food but had heard that being a Chef could be high stress, so wasn't sure if it was for him.

"I was obsessed with food and cooking ever since I was a teenager. Making elaborate pastas for lunch, and baking lime pies for my flat mates. I was a bit resistant to becoming a chef because of all the stories about stress and pressure. Eventually I decided to go for it, and I loved it."

Building a foundation of skills

When Zach studied, the programme was known as the "Level 4 Diploma in Culinary Arts", these days, the equivalent would be the Level 4 Certificate in Cookery. The year-long practical programme introduces students with little to no experience to the culinary field. Students learn various cooking methods, food preparation, food safety, and techniques required to create a variety of restaurant style dishes from meat and poultry (or entrees and mains) to pastry and desserts.

The focus on practical work appealed to Zach, and he had no aversion to sampling so many types of dishes, saying he "ate like a king".

Diving into the industry

During his course, Zach got his foot in the door doing work experience at Monterey in Newtown, a small smoked meats and burger restaurant. Once he graduated, they offered him a full-time job. After that, he picked up various different skills at companies across the Wellington region; learning about allergies at a high-end childcare centre, variety as a temp chef at catering companies, and eventually, Seashore Cabaret, where he worked his way up to Sous Chef. That then led to the opportunity at Abandoned Brewery.

Creative freedom in the kitchen

Zach loves the variety and freedom at Abandoned Brewery. He's got a lot of work to do, but he's able to get creative.

"In a small kitchen and small team, my role really includes a little bit of everything. From creating and costing the menu, to dealing with suppliers, to cleaning fridges to staff training, to getting annoyed when someone comes in at 9.30pm on a Wednesday. I do a bit of everything."

Whitireia and WelTec hospitality and cookery programmes return to Petone campus

Published on 22 February 2024

WelTec's hospitality programmes have returned to the original Kensington Avenue hub in Petone.

The decision to leave the previous location on Cuba Street in Central Wellington came about following the end of the lease and a willingness to be joined up with other tutors and students on a WelTec campus in a community central to the Wellington region.

"Re-creating our hospitality hub on the Petone campus will draw students from a wide catchment in the Wellington region," says Mick Jays, Head of School, Creative and Hospitality.

"It is on street level and has parking, making it more accessible for our students and creates a better link to the campus and surrounding neighbourhoods. We have upgraded the site significantly to create three cutting edge industrial teaching kitchens and a service kitchen and as part of the return, the training restaurant and cafe, along with a new pop-up bakery, will be open to the public on certain days of the week."

"Having the students practice their cookery and hospitality skills in our on-campus eateries will be fantastic experience for them and will connect them nicely to the 'foodie' hub of Petone," says Ben Shadbolt, who is leading the project.

"Hospitality is now so much more than cookery. The flexibility in course offerings allows student to 'earn while they learn' and leads to a diversity of careers."

"Most of our managed traineeship chef students will already be working, getting qualified while they continue to work. Hospitality level 3 can either be done full time for 17 weeks or two days a week for 34 weeks. The diploma in Hospitality Management level 5 and the Diploma in Cookery level 5 occupy students two days a week allowing students time to work and get on-the-job experience. We also offer a food and beverage level 4 qualification delivered one day a week over 17 weeks with 12 hours on-the-job training.

"As part of helping students into work or work experience during or following their study, we link locally and regionally with employers which span a wide range of food service, food production, restaurants, hotels, aged care and conference centres," says Ben.

Commenting on the move, Tony Parun, director of Petone-based food company, Brezelmania commented: "We have a longstanding and very good relationship with WelTec with many graduates successfully take up jobs with us. Petone is a vibrant place with many food businesses and restaurants, I think it is a great area for WelTec to run its hospitality programmes from here."

Helen Lim studied level 3 Hospitality at the WelTec Cuba Street Campus. She is now studying level 4 Cookery at the relocated site in Petone, and is enrolled for further hospitality studies into level 5 starting in March.

"I am excited to be working toward my diploma in hospitality at WelTec and by the time I am complete I will have some knowledge of both cooking, as well as the business side. The new Petone hub for my WelTec study is friendly and I like that there is parking."

New Zealand Certificate in Cookery (Level 4) Managed Traineeship

 Level 4
 1 year part-time
 $6,636* (indicative for 2025 intake)

Entry requirements

Candidates must be employed for a minimum of 24 hours per week in an approved hospitality business in an appropriate position (e.g.: Kitchen Assistant, Commis Chef, Junior Chef or similar role).

If you're working in a commercial kitchen or an employer wanting to develop your staff, this is the programme for you. “Earn while you learn” and turn your experience into a qualification and become a qualified chef. Develop your skills from the basics to advanced techniques guided by our professional chef tutors in a hands-on purpose-built environment.

What you will learn

The WelTec Managed Traineeship leads to the New Zealand Certificate in Cookery Level 4 and is specifically designed for trainee chefs already working in professional kitchens.

The one-year programme requires an on campus attendance of one day per week on alternate weeks, and is designed to support trainees to work towards becoming a qualified chef whilst continuing to be employed in the industry.

You will learn through practical tutorials and workshops and be assessed in a purpose-built environment alongside other trainee chefs. Access to our online learning system and regular onsite visits will provide additional support to both the trainee and the employer throughout the process.
